Betty Quinn is an angel. One year ago, Betty organized a Chapter of the Christmas Box Club in Utah County, with the purpose of providing much needed clothing, diapers, toys, books, quilts, and just about anything else a child might need.

Betty works with local businesses, churches, schools, and other groups or individuals to identify and collect these items, which go to help children who are in foster care and children whose parents are unable to afford essential items for their children.

As a result of her efforts, and the many volunteers working with her, they have created the Christmas Box Room located at the Provo DCFS office. The room is completely full of necessities, so when a caseworker knows of a family in need, they can go to the Christmas Box Room, gather the needed items, and deliver them to the family.

If a certain item is not available, we let Betty know, and she flies into action, calling and emailing individuals and groups to find the missing item.

Betty is an Angel, and our families thank her!
